

I Let You Go by Clare Mackintosh.

This was Clare`s debut novel. The writing of this psychological thriller was enabled by her C.I.D. career. The twists in this story are what makes it so absorbing and yet unsettling. Following the death of 5 year old Jacob, by a hit and run driver. Jenna Gray feeling guilty of the murder, escapes to Wales, from Bristol, to start a new life in a remote village. She took to doing photography on the beach and made a good friend of Patrick who was the local Vet and also a Life Boatman.

Ray and Kate are the Detectives investigating the case, but their lives become uncomfortably “close”

Having read Part 1 and then starting Part 2 the storyline cunningly takes a twist that changes your thoughts completely, very clever.

Jenna`s past catches up with her including her abusive husband Ian. The consequences are devastating.

This is the second novel of Clare`s we have read as a group. We all formed our own pictures of the characters and also the outcome of the story.

A great read and made those of us not into Thrillers want to read more.
